Serving the Connecticut shoreline since 1947, Shoreline Auto Body, Inc. has built its reputation on quality collision repair, advanced equipment and paint systems, and professional customer service.

When owner David Pacileo decided to expand his Westbrook operation with a second location, he selected Pat Munger Construction Company, Inc. to design and build a new state-of-the-art collision repair facility on Route 80 in North Branford.

Build The Best - Be The Best

The Solution

Munger delivered a 7,000-square-foot Varco Pruden metal building featuring specialized spray booth lighting and ventilation, radiant floor heating, floor drainage, four overhead doors, second-floor offices and employee amenities.

The building's two-tone exterior, standing-seam roof, extended eaves and entry canopy created a distinctive appearance, while the bright, energy-efficient customer area included a reception desk, waiting area, refreshment bar and showroom.

The Results

The completed facility combined the functionality of an advanced collision repair center with the professional environment Shoreline Auto Body envisioned. Shortly after opening, production quickly increased through customer and insurance referrals.

Teamwork & Collaboration

Munger served as the design-build general contractor and construction manager, working through multiple design iterations to balance functionality, aesthetics and cost. Munger craftsmen also completed carpentry, millwork, trim and concrete work.

"I'm very happy with our new facility in this highly visible location. I'm impressed that a contractor could put together a building of this complexity without any of the mistakes that you'd expect."
