Creating an Interim Home for a Growing Faith Community

As Shri Shirdi Sai Temple of Connecticut continued planning for its permanent temple in Manchester, the organization needed a functional interim building that could support its congregation on the same property.

As an existing Munger Construction client, the Temple turned to Pat Munger Construction Company, Inc. to help design and build the new facility. The project began with an on-site meeting and a request for Munger Construction to develop and price a smaller building that could meet the congregation's immediate needs while fitting into the Temple's broader plans for the property.

Build The Best - Be The Best

Success Story: Shri Shirdi Sai Temple of CT

THE CHALLENGE

The new building needed to provide more than an open gathering space. It had to create a practical, code-compliant place of worship that could accommodate the congregation's day-to-day activities. At the same time, the organization's long-term vision for a permanent temple continued to progress.

The facility also needed to work within an active site that was being developed in phases.

THE SOLUTION

Munger Construction worked with the Temple to develop and construct a straightforward, efficient facility centered around a large congregation and prayer space.

The completed layout incorporates the main worship area along with supporting spaces including restrooms, utility and service areas, and other rooms necessary for the congregation's use. The construction documents also coordinated the building's structural, architectural, plumbing, HVAC, electrical, and life-safety systems as part of the overall project.

The exterior features a simple, durable building envelope and a low-profile form appropriate for its interim role, while providing the Temple with a comfortable, functional space for its community.

THE RESULT

The completed building gave Shri Shirdi Sai Temple of Connecticut a dedicated space where its congregation could gather as the organization continued working toward its larger vision for the site.

The result is a welcoming, functional space that serves the Temple's congregation today while supporting its larger vision for the future, demonstrating how thoughtful design and construction can turn an immediate need into an important step toward long-term growth.
